2026-27 FFA Discussion Meet Questions

1. As Alabama's rural communities grow, so does the need for electricity and other energy sources. How can communities meet these growing needs while keeping energy affordable and reliable and protecting farmland and landowners' rights?

2. Many rural communities struggle to find veterinarians who care for livestock and other large animals. What can Alabama schools, agricultural organizations and communities do to encourage more young people to become large-animal veterinarians and work in rural areas?

3. Many agricultural businesses, including meat-processing facilities, struggle to find workers with the right skills and training. How can Alabama schools, FFA chapters and agricultural organizations provide more hands-on learning opportunities and prepare young people for careers in agriculture?

4. FFA helps students develop leadership skills, but many students do not stay involved in agricultural organizations after graduation. How can Farm Bureau, Young Farmers and FFA work together to encourage more young people to stay involved and become future agricultural leaders?

5. More consumers are asking questions about how their food is produced and how it affects their health. How can farmers and agricultural organizations address these concerns while helping people understand the science and technology used to produce safe, healthy and affordable food?
